Ever yearn to wander the rolling green hills of Ireland? Hike along the towering Cliffs of Mohr? Wander through small villages talking to friendly townsfolk, eating the local foods and sipping the local brew in a pub warmed by a roaring peat fire?

Well, it's pretty difficult (and spendy!) to get your RV to the Emerald Isle, but we have a tucked-away spot here in Northern California that would make an Irish man feel right at home.

Windswept and foggy Point Reyes abounds with verdant pastures, winding roads, craggy seashores and friendly faces. And now is a great time to go because September and October are, well, less windswept and foggy.

The 70,000-acre Point Reyes National Seashore offers a cornucopia of activities for the outdoor enthusiast. Leisurely drives wind over pastoral Inverness Ridge to the area's historic lighthouse, elephant seal viewing areas or beautiful beaches perfect for a picnic. It also offers 150 miles for hiking, horseback riding and bike riding.

The views and villages of Point Reyes may be charmingly rustic, but its food seen is refined. You can watch cheese makers practice their craft then taste the fruits of their labors, visit an oyster farm and have a one-of-a kind picnic, or stop into one of the fine restaurants in the villages of Olema, Point Reyes Station and Inverness.

Before you enjoy what Point Reyes has to offer, come by our 16th Annual Northern California Fall RV Show and Sale, which is right around the corner! It will return to the Alameda County Fairgrounds Sept. 24 through Oct. 3. Outfit your rig with the latest and greatest, then head out for some peace and quiet at Point Reyes.

Happy RVing!
